ILW 2017

Welcome

The American Branch of the International Law Association (ABILA) and the International Law Students Association (ILSA) welcome you to the annual International Law Weekend (ILW) conference in New York City. This exciting event brings together hundreds of practitioners, law professors, members of governmental and non-governmental organizations, and students.

The theme of ILW 2017 is “International Law in Challenging Times.” Can international law rise to the challenge? For decades, international law has provided legal solutions to global problems through the development of substantive areas of law, court systems, and a framework for modern international relations. Now we must ask, is this post-WWII regime still relevant? Can it meet the needs of the global community? The rapidly changing global landscape will test the adaptability and dynamism of international law. Unprecedented health crises, massive refugee outflows, climate change, gender inequality, and other global challenges require innovative solutions. This is an opportunity for international law to re-establish its strong connection with the global community it serves. Panels at ILW 2017 will examine current global challenges, potential solutions, and a broad range of dynamic issues in both public and private international law.

ILW begins Thursday evening, October 19, 2017 with a distinguished opening panel at the New York City Bar (42 W. 44th Street). The panel will include Martin Flaherty, Co-Director of the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice; Amb. Elinor Hammar skjöld, Director General for Legal Affairs of the Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Stockholm; Judge Theodor Meron, President of the Mechanism for International Criminal Tribunals (MICT); and D. Stephen Mathias, Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations for Legal Affairs (and head of the Office of the Legal Counsel). ABILA President David P. Stewart will moderate. A reception generously sponsored by Debevoise & Plimpton LLP will follow.

The conference continues Friday, October 20 and Saturday, October 21, 2017 at Fordham University School of Law (150 West 62nd Street). Friday’s activities feature a keynote address by Sir Christopher Greenwood, Judge, International Court of Justice. This event is open to all conference attendees. The conference will also include meetings of ILSA and ABILA members. Those interested in joining ILSA or ABILA are invited to attend.

On Friday evening, a reception will be generously hosted by the Permanent Mission of the Republic of Bulgaria to the United Nations (11 E 84th St, New York, NY 10028). Pre-registration is required for this event. For security reasons, only those who pre-registered may attend. Registered guests must bring photo identification to present at check-in. A nominal ABILA registration fee of $10 will be charged to confirm participation. The ABILA registration fee will be applied to cover other costs of the International Law Weekend not related to the reception. The support of the Permanent Mission of the Republic of Bulgaria towards International Law Weekend is greatly appreciated.

A number of panels this year will be designated for continuing legal education (CLE). CLE credit will be offered to all ILW attendees at no additional cost through the sponsorship and assistance of White & Case LLP, which is an accredited provider of New York and California CLE credit. Attorneys licensed in other states can apply for CLE credit in their own jurisdiction using the New York CLE certificate provided by White & Case.

Every year, the ILSA Journal of International and Comparative Law publishes an issue that contains articles written by speakers and panelists at International Law Weekend. This issue is titled “The International Practitioner’s Notebook.” Please email ilsa.journal.novasoutheastern@gmail.com to subscribe to the Journal or purchase this issue.

Opening Panel: The Challenges Facing International Law

The panel will feature a moderated discussion among the panelists on the many challenges facing international law (and international lawyers) today. Keeping the peace in a rapidly changing political landscape is of course one imperative, but we must also help to meet a range of other challenges including the imperative of economic development and the need to deal with unprecedented health crises, massive refugee outflows, accelerating climate change, persistent gender inequality and other difficult, dynamic issues which require innovative solutions from both public and private international law. Members of the audience will have an opportunity to pose their own questions to the panelists.

Moderator:

- David P. Stewart, President, American Branch of the International Law Association; Professor from Practice, Director of the Center on Transnational Business and the Law, Georgetown Law

Panelists:

- Prof. Martin Flaherty, Leitner Family Professor at Fordham Law, Co-Director of the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice, and Chair of the Council on International Affairs of the New York City Bar Association
- Amb. Elinor Hammar skjöld, Director General for Legal Affairs of the Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Stockholm, and former Swedish Ambassador to Israel
- D. Stephen Mathias, Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations for Legal Affairs (and head of the Office of the Legal Counsel); formerly Director of the General Legal Division in the UN's Office of Legal Affairs; Counsellor for Legal Affairs at the United States Embassy in The Hague
- Judge Theodor Meron, President of the Mechanism for International Criminal Tribunals (MICT)

9:00am The Alien Tort Statute & Corporate Liability: Take Two
Room 2-02C *This term, the Supreme Court will hear Jesner v. Arab Bank and decide whether the Alien Tort Statute supports corporate liability for certain violations of international law. If the answer is no, little may remain of the robust ATS litigation of the 1990s and 2000s. The panel will explore the significance of the case to human rights advocates, multinational business entities, victims of terrorism, and the U.S. government.*

The Use of Non-UN Sanctions for UN Purposes: An Old Debate Revisited

Building on the ongoing work of the ILA Study Group on Sanctions, this panel explores interlinkages between 'non-UN' sanctions and the UN. It discusses how UNSC or UNGA recommendations inform questions of legality, and whether factual determinations by the UNSC can serve as a basis for the imposition of non-UN sanctions. It also addresses how the periodical UNGA debates on 'unilateral economic measures' inform the continuing uncertainty concerning the permissibility of third-party countermeasures. Finally, it examines how non-UN sanctions rate in terms of effectiveness as compared to UN sanctions proper.

Moderator:

- David P. Stewart, President, American Branch of the International Law Association Professor from Practice, Director of the Center on Transnational Business and the Law, Georgetown Law

Panelists:

- Larissa van den Herik, Professor of Public International Law, Leiden University, Grotius Centre for International Legal studies

The Israeli Occupation of Palestine at 50: Challenges to the Law of Occupation and Its Relevance

Long term occupations pose a challenge to international law. Is it relevant? Can the law of occupation help address these occupations and engage with their changing forms? On the fiftieth anniversary of Israel's occupation of the Occupied Palestinian Territory this panel will examine the relevance of the law of occupation to the Israeli occupations as well as to other situations. With on one hand relatively short but heavily "transformative" occupations (especially Iraq) and on the other hand long term occupations that may look more like conquest or annexation (de facto or de jure) such as the Israeli one (but also the occupations of Western Sahara, Northern Cyprus) - the question arises, is the law of occupation which envisages a short term conservationist regime still of relevance. Can it stand to today's challenges? The panel will address these questions with particular reference to the Israeli occupation of the OPT.

Moderator:

- Ruti Teitel, Professor, New York Law School

Panelists:

- Omar Dajani, Professor, McGeorge School of Law, University of the Pacific

Structural Constraints on Judicial Arbitrators' Independence?

Over the past decade, the burgeoning scholarship on international courts has examined the various ways that the increasing judicialization of international relations has enhanced the ability of international courts and arbitral tribunals to constrain the exercise of public power. Only recently, however, have scholars devoted attention to states' response to the expanded powers of international judges and arbitrators. This proposed panel builds on the emerging literature on "backlash" against arbitrators and international courts by examining new threats to judicial authority. To do so, panelists will identify and analyze recent efforts by states to constrain the powers of international courts and tribunals, as well as the strategies judges and arbitrators use to maintain their autonomy and independence.

The Internationalization of Private Law, or the Privatization of International Law

This panel engages with the rise of the idea of private law as a mechanism of global governance, and tackles it from two simultaneously complementary and conflicting perspectives. The first perspective is the idea of private law being increasingly internationalized; the second perspective we address is the use of private law mechanisms for the resolution of disputes normally considered to be in the realm of public international law.

Moderator:

- Dr. Lucas Lixinski, Senior Lecturer of Law, UNSW Sydney
- Julian Arato, Assistant Professor of Law, Brooklyn Law School

Panelists:

- José E Alvarez, Herbert and Rose Rubin Professor of International Law, NYU Law School

The Role of Customary International Law in Challenging Times

This panel will explore the role that customary international law can play in today's turbulent world. Customary international law is assuming increasing relevance in regulating many issues of global concern. The International Law Commission (ILC) is also engaged in a major project on the identification of customary international law. The panel will investigate both the current work of the ILC in clarifying customary international law's foundations and customary law's current and potential role in responding to contemporary global challenges, including those involving women's rights, environmental rights, and the settlement of investment-related disputes.

Moderators:

- Brian Lepard, Harold W. Conroy Distinguished Professor of Law, University of Nebraska College of Law

Panelists:

- Michael Wood, Special Rapporteur of the International Law Commission on the Identification of Customary International Law and Barrister, 20 Essex Street, London

Using International Law to Advance Women's Rights in the United States

This panel explores how international law, particularly the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), can be used to bolster and strengthen women's rights under domestic law in the United States (US). The discussion will bring together constitutional law, human rights and women's rights experts who will draw upon their experiences to discuss how CEDAW can be used to revitalize the women's rights movement in the United States today.

Moderators:

- Tracy Higgins, Professor of Law, Fordham University; co-director of the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice

Panelists:

- Janet Benshoof, President and Founder, Global Justice Center; Founder, Center for Reproductive Rights; Previous Director, ACLU's Reproductive Freedom Project

International Water Conflict and Cooperation: Grappling with the Allocation of Freshwater Between States in the Face of Climate Change

Climate change, combined with increasing populations and urbanization, is bringing new challenges to the management and cross-border sharing of freshwater resources in the international system. International law provides limited guidance and regulation, raising the likelihood of instability and conflict between and within States. This panel will discuss ways in which transboundary surface and groundwater disputes can best be addressed and prevented under existing legal frameworks, taking comparative lessons from both domestic and international dispute resolution. It will also consider ways in which the international community can strengthen governance regimes for the future so that water may serve as a bridge for diplomacy rather than a source of dispute.

Moderator:

- Kenneth Juan Figueroa, Partner, Foley Hoag LLP

Panelists:

- Matthew Draper, Draper & Draper
- Christina Hioureas, Chair, United Nations Practice Group at Foley Hoag LLP

Ethical Challenges: Evolving Norms & Practices for Arbitrator Disqualification

As advocates increasingly rely on arbitrator challenges as part of their toolkit, courts and institutions are reconsidering how best to ensure that challenges are decided fairly. This panel will address emerging issues in arbitration ethics by focusing on three themes: (i) reflections on contemporary standards of arbitrator impartiality and independence following recent high-profile challenges; (ii) the role of local courts in this critical stage of the arbitral process; and (iii) an assessment of the recent developments relating to greater transparency with respect to decisions on arbitrator challenges.

Surveillance, Privacy & Human Rights: Outlook for 2018

Surveillance and privacy will be primary issues for international law in 2018. The European Union's General Data Protection Regulation will take effect. Transatlantic data transfer under the Privacy Shield agreement faces legal challenges. In late 2017, the U.S. Congress will decide whether to reauthorize section 702 of the FISA Amendments Act, which regulates much surveillance by the National Security Agency. In an interactive roundtable format, our distinguished panel will analyze these vital issues.

Human Rights After Trump: Survival and Resistance

From the executive orders banning travel to the United States, to the imposition of an even more draconian global gag rule on abortion, to the rollback of civil rights by the new Attorney General, the Trump administration threatens human rights at home and abroad. Paradoxically, the new president has generated massive, if inchoate, support for human rights and galvanized the human rights community. More than 3 million people across the country protested the day after Trump's inauguration, while hundreds of sister protests occurred throughout the world. Protests have continued, while new legal challenges have been brought in a variety of areas. This panel, 'Human Rights After Trump: Survival and Resistance,' will offer strategies for maintaining human rights across a broad range of areas; including immigration, racial justice, women's rights, and national security; drawing on a newly-energized group of lawyers, teachers, and activists.

Challenges to Private International Law

This panel is a variation on a perennial favorite of ILW. While the traditional panel reviews private international law developments over the past year, this one will address specific “challenges” that face the development of private international law on a global basis. Presentations will address: (1) challenges facing the creation of new international legal instruments in organizations such as UNCITRAL, UNIDROIT, OAS/CIDIP, and the Hague Conference on Private International Law; (2) challenges raised by recent judicial and arbitral decisions that affect private international law (particularly in the traditional PIL trilogy of jurisdiction, applicable law, and the recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments).

Outer Space in the New Administration and Beyond: Commercial, Civil, and Growing Security Challenges

Commercial actors are investing in new space activities, including asteroid mining and on-orbit satellite servicing. Civil space plans raise the challenges of possible public-private partnerships and interactions with commercial activities. Threats posed by new weapon systems and the prospect of armed conflict in space raise critical questions regarding military uses of space. This panel focuses on the challenges of international and national regulation of outer space in light of these new activities and growing international security issues.

The Future of the Law of Naval Warfare: The Launch of the ICRC's Updated Commentary to the Second Geneva Convention

In May 2017, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) launched an updated version of its commentary on the Second Geneva Convention of 1949, which protects the wounded, sick, shipwrecked of the armed forces at sea as well as certain other persons and objects, including medical personnel and hospital ships. While military capabilities have evolved rapidly in the naval domain, the Second Geneva Convention has remained unchanged since its adoption, leaving many unanswered questions in an age when tensions in places like the South China Sea have increased the possibility of maritime conflicts. The panelists will discuss some of the key issues that were tackled in the updated Commentaries, and will give their unique perspectives on how the law of armed conflict should apply to armed conflict at sea in the future, in particular when it comes to the protection of victims.

International Disaster Law: Where to Next?

The panel will take stock of recent developments, and contemplate what the future might bring (including the possibility of the adoption of a treaty based on the ILC's 2016 draft articles on the protection of persons in the event of disasters), for international disaster law against the backdrop of other major developments, including the adoption of the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals.

Moderator:

- Arnold Pronto, Principal Legal Officer, Secretariat of the International Law Commission, Co-Chair of the Disaster Law Interest Group of the American Society of International Law

Panelists:

- Eduardo Valencia Ospina, Special Rapporteur on Protection of Persons in the Event of Disasters, International Law Commission (by video)
- Giulio Bartolini, Associate Professor of International Law, Roma Tre University
- Marco Toscano-Rivalta, Chief, New York Liaison Office, United Nations Office for Disaster Risk Reduction (UNISDR)

9:00am Global Persecution of Lawyers
Room 2-02C The panel will focus on several regions across the world and will compare tactics used to harass lawyers by their governments. These tactics violate international principles and pose a danger to the rule of law. They often include harassment, threats, governmental supervision, and, in extreme cases, targeted imprisonment or killing lawyers and judges for faithfully discharging their duties. The panelists will also discuss what we can do to assist these lawyers under threat.

9:00am The Changing Paradigm of Investment Protections in Latin America: Implications for Investment and Investor-State Arbitration
Room 2-02B Having experienced a wave of investment arbitrations, Latin American States have begun to react to the Investor-State Dispute Settlement (ISDA) regime by proposing often drastic changes in their treaties and multilateral agreements, and in some cases withdrawing from them all together. Venezuela withdrew from ICSID in 2012. Ecuador has denounced treaties with several countries, including Spain, Canada and the United States. Recently, the member countries of Mercosur signed a new Investment Protocol that limited certain investment protections, placed a greater emphasis on sustainable development, and replaced arbitration with a permanent commission. In this context, and under the shadow (or light) of proposed changes in CETA and TPP, Canada, the United States and Mexico will be renegotiating NAFTA. This panel will analyze these changes, and discuss their permanence or ephemerality. It will also address how these changes will affect (both in the short and long-term) investment, development and ISDS in Latin America.

Putting the Humanitarian in Humanitarian Intervention

The world is experiencing natural and man-made disasters at an alarming rate. From successive hurricanes to simultaneous famines, the current demand for humanitarian assistance is staggering. Often states exercise their sovereign powers to invite other states to contribute humanitarian assistance, but what happens when a state with humanitarian needs does not extend such an invitation, as may happen when those needs result from civil war? On the one hand, the modern international order is built on principles of sovereignty and non-intervention. On the other, the international order seeks to protect human rights, including economic and social rights. The result is debates over such things as the legality of humanitarian intervention. That debate has focused on the propriety of military intervention. But what if the intervention is not military? What if the intervention is about access to humanitarian assistance? This panel will explore the challenges to providing access to humanitarian assistance as a response to natural and man-made events, the current on-the-ground realities of this response, and the possibility that international law might support an intervention that is truly humanitarian.

Accountability for International Crimes in Syria and Beyond: A New UN Approach

How to achieve justice in Syria when the ICC is sidelined and the Security Council paralyzed? In December 2016, the General Assembly established an International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism (IIIM) to prepare possible prosecutions in national, regional or international courts. This panel, featuring diplomats, officials and activists directly involved in the IIIM's creation and operation, explores its mandate, challenges and the role of the General Assembly in the ongoing conflict. It also asks whether the IIIM serves as a model for a new generation of accountability mechanisms.

Room 2-02B

Approved for

The Trump Administration has evinced skepticism--even hostility--for NAFTA and has suggested that the United States may withdraw from or seek to renegotiate the terms of the treaty. Understanding the perspectives of the United States, Canada and Mexico in this environment is critical for international investment practitioners. This panel will aim to provide diverse perspectives from panelists with unique insights into the US, Mexican and Canadian positions based on prior or present experience working for each of those states. Although panelists will be encouraged to shape the discussion in light of their expertise, questions to be considered may include what would happen if the United States withdrew from NAFTA? Would another treaty come into force? Is the American position really a break with past administrations, or more of the same just in different packaging? What is the likelihood that any of these proposals go through?

10:45am Defining Global Migration

Room 2-02A

Migration has been described as “the last bastion of sovereignty.” Massive global flows of human beings have been addressed almost entirely through discretionary state policies, with little constraint from the supranational level. Unlike all other major global issues, migration is not subject to robust international legal regimes. The only major international migration-related convention, the 1951 Refugee Convention, implicates only a fraction of migrant flows. This panel will explore the emergence of global migration law beyond the Refugee Convention and consider its application to the growing contradictions of state responses to unstoppable migration flows. The panel will address the existing dispersion of migration law through other international law fields, including human rights and humanitarian law, the law of the sea, international labor law, the law of trafficking, and trade law. The panel will consider the prospects for institutional and conceptual consolidation.

Habeas, PRBs, and Military Commissions: What Legal Redress Would New Captures Sent to Guantanamo Have?

The detention facility at Guantanamo Bay has long been a controversial, seemingly unsolvable legal dilemma. Progress has been made with respect to the legal resources available to detainees, particularly after Boumediene guaranteed habeas to Guantanamo detainees, the Military Commissions Act was revised in 2009, and the Periodic Review Boards (PRBs) commenced in 2013, but challenges have remained for the remaining 41 detainees. The panelists will address these legal and political challenges, and how they may affect future captures brought to Guantanamo.

The Global Public/Private Divide: Surrogacy, Contracts and International Law

The panel will explore the current deliberations of The Hague Conference on Private International Law to draft a surrogacy convention. Given the rapid advance of medical science and the changing nature of the family, there has been an increase in transnational surrogacy contracting. While many of these arrangements have been concluded without controversy, in some cases, parentage issues and conflicts of law have arisen. Furthermore, a great deal has been written about the human rights and gender inequality implications of surrogacy. The Hague Conference has been holding meetings and discussing the possibility of drafting a surrogacy and parentage convention that will aid in resolving the conflicts that arise from these contracts. They have contemplated using the Adoption Convention as a model. But many questions remain unresolved. The panelists will explore the international legal problems that have arisen from the rapid increase in surrogacy contracts and consider possible solutions using transnational and international law. Panelists may also discuss linkages between surrogacy and regulation of other areas of reproductive rights and the uses of human rights law more generally to demonstrate how surrogacy may fit into a broader discussion.

ALL RISE: Journeys to a Just World (Film)

Room 2-01B

How can international disputes be resolved in the courtroom rather than on the battlefield? ALL RISE brings this complex question into sharp and personalized focus through the journeys of passionate law students from Israel, Jamaica, Palestine, Russia, Singapore, and Uganda to compete in the world championships in Washington, DC, of the Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition, the world's largest simulated court competition. These law students advanced through national competitions to the world championships in Washington, DC. Their hard work is put to the test, as they are grilled by volunteer judges from around the world, including sitting judges from the International Court of Justice, and we see them overcome pressure and personal challenges to persevere in the Jessup.

ALL RISE has been selected by the DOC NYC Film Festival, the Manchester Film Festival, where it received a Jury Award, and most recently at the United Nations Association Film Festival in California. It has also been selected for the American Film Showcase.

1:45pm Room 2-02C	International Humanitarian Law & Islamic Law: Toward Normative Engagement in a Challenging Time The so-called Islamic State in Syria and Iraq advances a conception of Islamic humanitarian law that is in stark contrast with core commitments of modern international humanitarian law. In light of its rise, there is an urgent need to focus more systematically on what Islamic humanitarian law is, where it comes from, and how it might be a source of engagement with a broader international humanitarian law regime. Our panel of experts on Islamic law and international law will explore these themes in greater depth.

International Recognition: Can the Normative be Practical?

Which political entities should the international community recognize as member states, conferring on them the rights and powers of statehood and entitling them to participate in formulating, adjudicating, and implementing international law? What criteria should be used, and are they defensible? Although these issues are familiar in the realms of legal doctrine and of the empirical study of international relations, explicit normative theorizing on state recognition and its consequences has been neglected. This panel aims to bring normative theory to bear on matters ranging from the factors bearing on state recognition, such as effective control and self-determination, to the rights that follow from its conferral, such as state immunity.
