INTERNATIONAL
LAW ASSOCIATION
AMERICAN BRANCH ▸ EST. 1922

Welcome to ILW 2024

The American Branch of the International Law Association welcomes you to its annual International Law Weekend (ILW) conference. The theme of ILW 2024 is Powerless Law or Law for the Powerless?

International law faces an existential threat as history unfolds at unprecedented speed worldwide. Indeed, international law and international institutions at times appear incapable of protecting vulnerable persons against war, disease, hunger, exploitation, climate change, and other human and natural catastrophes. Some people—both individually and collectively—are openly eschewing legal values and frameworks in order to pursue results through other means, including dangerous and destabilizing ones. Is international law, in fact, powerless, or does it remain a source of power that vulnerable persons can utilize to protect and advance their rights and interests? This year's ILW is focused on engaged, interactive, and inclusive discussions about how international law can transcend perceptions and misperceptions of its powerlessness and fulfill its aspirations of balancing power through principles of justice, equality, and dignity.

ILW 2024 will consider these issues through a diverse collection of engaging and provocative panels and plenary sessions. The audience includes practitioners, academics, UN diplomats, business leaders, federal and state government officials, NGO leaders, journalists, students, and interested persons. There is a broad array of public and private international law topics in each program time slot.

ILW 2024 opens at the New York City Bar Association on Thursday, October 24, 2024, with the President's High-Level Opening Plenary Panel. With welcome remarks from American Branch Chair Leila Nadya Sadat and moderated by American Branch President Michael P. Scharf, keynote speakers include: Lori F. Damrosch (Hamilton Fish Professor of International Law and Diplomacy, Columbia Law School), Harold Hongju Koh (Sterling Professor of International Law, Yale Law School), Sean D. Murphy (Manatt/Ahn Professor of International Law, George Washington University Law School), and Nilüfer Oral (Director of the Centre for International Law, National University of Singapore). Before the Opening Plenary Panel, a special session will highlight Emerging Voices in international law. An Opening Reception will follow the Plenary Panel.

The conference continues at Fordham University School of Law on Friday and Saturday, October 25-26, 2024, and features 36 panels on various topics. Keynote and plenary speakers include: Dapo Akande (Chichele Professor of Public International Law, University of Oxford), Diane Desierto (Professor of Law and Global Affairs, University of Notre Dame), Marko Milanovic (Professor of Public International Law, University of Reading), Ann Skelton (Chair of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child), J.H.H. Weiler (Joseph Straus Professor of Law, New York University School of Law), and the winner of the 2024 ABILA Outstanding Achievement Award, Hon. Charles N. Brower (Judge ad hoc, International Court of Justice). These events are open to all conference attendees. ILW 2024 also features community and committee networking rooms and opportunities to meet with legal book publishers. The Friday night program concludes with a Reception at UNICEF Headquarters (advance ticket purchase required) and International Law Trivia at Fordham University School of Law.

The Saturday program includes the 102nd Annual Members Meeting, Elections, and Award Ceremony. The Annual Meeting is open to members and non-members alike, however only members can vote. The program also includes a Career Session for Students and Young Lawyers.

Multiple panels in every timeslot are designated for continuing legal education (CLE) credit. CLE credit is offered to all ILW attendees at no additional cost through the sponsorship of an accredited New York and California CLE credit provider. Attorneys licensed in other states can apply for CLE credit in their own jurisdiction using the New York CLE certificate. Please sign in at the beginning of each panel you attend using the CLE registration form and fill out the survey provided after the events to claim your CLE.

About the American Branch

The American Branch of the International Law Association is dedicated to the study, clarification and development of International Law and the advancement of peace, equity and justice worldwide. It is a diverse and inclusive community of individuals working or interested in international law. The Branch unites practitioners, academics, students, government officials, diplomats, and members of international and nongovernmental organizations. Members work together on committees to issue reports, amicus briefs, and letters to Congress, federal agencies, the United Nations, and other international organizations on a range of current and evolving topics.

The American Branch is part of a truly international organization. The International Law Association was established in 1873 and is composed of sixty-six national branches (including the Headquarters Branch). It is the preeminent international non-governmental organization involved in developing and restating international law. The American Branch nominates members – both leading U.S. international lawyers and early career professionals – to participate in ILA committees. The opportunity to help prepare draft treaties or studies in collaboration with leading international lawyers and academics from around the world is vital to furthering an understanding of international law. Committee members and others who attend the ILA's biennial international conferences find their involvement with the ILA to be immensely rewarding.

The American Branch has its own committees, which allow members to combine service and academic or advocacy work. These committees are unusual in terms of the range of opportunities they provide for member-initiated projects, and there are opportunities for student involvement as well. The American Branch's committees – unlike the Branch as a whole – may advocate for specific positions on international legal issues. Committees have filed amicus briefs in appellate cases and communicated with government officials on a variety of issues. Branch committees also engage in traditional, rigorous academic work, sometimes undertaking projects that complement the work of parallel international ILA committees, and sometimes developing their own projects.

The Branch performs exceptional educational and professional service through its national and regional International Law Weekends. Other international law organizations also hold major national conferences, of course, but none follow the Branch's lead in offering low admission price to members of the organization, to members of cosponsoring organizations, and free admission to students. ILW provides significant opportunities for attendees to learn from and meet top international lawyers from private practices, academia, the government, nongovernmental organizations, the United Nations, and other international organizations.

Join the American Branch today!

Membership opens a world of intellectual and professional engagement opportunities at a reasonable price.

Value for members includes:

- Invitation to join in the work of the Branch's twenty Committees and Study Groups
- A discounted rate for International Law Weekend (free registration for students)
- Participation in the Branch's regional meetings
- Participation in ILA Biennials and other ILA regional conferences
- The opportunity to have their work featured in the Branch's biannual Newsletter.

Letter from Branch Leadership

On behalf of the ABILA Board, it is our pleasure to welcome you to ILW '24!

With over 1,200 participants, this conference has grown over the 102 years of the ABILA to be one of the largest gatherings of international lawyers, international law professors, and students in the world. And this year it comes at a propitious time.

For, in just two weeks, the United States will elect its 47th President. The new President will chart the United States' course with allies and adversaries, international organizations and NGOs, while shaping the country's foreign policy at a time of extraordinary challenge.

The vital role that international law can and should play in meeting those challenges - from climate change to unchecked immigration, from human rights violations to mass atrocities, from the potential trade war with China to the hot wars in Ukraine and the Middle East - is the subject of the over 30 panels at this year's conference.

The theme of ILW '24 requires us to consider whether International Law is capable of meeting those challenges, while protecting not just the powerful but also the powerless. We look forward to ardent but always respectful discussions within and outside the classrooms of our host, Fordham Law School. And above all, we look forward to reconnecting with old friends and making new friendships.

Sincerely,

Michael P. Scharf and Leila Nadya Sadat
President and Chair of the American Branch of the International Law Association

President’s Opening Plenary: Powerless Law or Law for the Powerless? The Once and Future International Court of Justice

This past year, the ICJ has issued groundbreaking decisions relating to the Gaza conflict and the status of Palestine, and it is poised to decide the momentous question of legal responsibility for climate change. Making law for the powerless, these cases have engendered praise, criticism, concern, and above all worldwide scrutiny of the Court’s role and efficacy. In a roundtable format, the President’s Opening Plenary panel will be a high-level discussion of contemporary issues related to the ICJ.

Friday Plenary Panel - Powerless Law or Law for the Powerless?

The Friday plenary will address the theme head-on. The panelists have addressed this year's theme, 'powerless law or law for the powerless,' through their own writing and their editorial work at the European Journal of International Law and its blog, EJILTalk!. This plenary brings together the team to reflect on the state of international law as a 'law for the powerless' today. At the end of the plenary, we hope to be in a better position to answer the question tying together this year's International Law Weekend - can international law fulfill its aspirations of balancing power through principles of justice, equality, and dignity - and if so, how.

The Core Paradox of International Refugee Law

Forced displacement highlights the failure of the modern state system and demands international legal intervention. Without citizenship, vulnerable populations face extreme risks, which international refugee law aims to mitigate by offering protection. However, this legal framework is often seen as "powerless law" due to frequent breaches, overlapping jurisdictions, and lack of accountability, leaving many unprotected. Unlike other branches of international law, refugee law relies solely on political accountability, allowing states to act with impunity. Despite this, the portrayal of refugee law as both powerless and protective can obscure its true impact. This Fireside Chat will challenge this conventional view by exploring how international refugee law can be both paradoxically powerless and powerful, considering its potential for both liberation and oppression.

The War in Ukraine: Lessons Learned and Challenges Ahead for International Criminal Law

Room 2-02C

Sponsored by
the ABILA
International
Criminal Court
Committee

Russia's invasion of the Ukraine is a defining moment for International Criminal Law (ICL). With the war in Ukraine now well into its third year, the panel will assess lessons learned and implications for the future of ICL. Panelists will address the impact of the conflict across several areas, including the crime of aggression, the role of the International Criminal Court, and the significance of national prosecutions in an increasingly multipolar world. The panel will also engage with the conference's underlying theme by exploring how Ukraine provides a window into the enduring tension between justice and power in international law.

Has the President Become a National Security Threat?

Room 2-02B

America faces a national security crisis: has the presidency become a national security threat? If re-elected, could President Trump, by a single tweet, withdraw America from the United Nations, NATO, and every treaty and international organization to which the United States belongs? Or could President Kamala Harris take the United States into war throughout the Mideast—Gaza, Yemen, Iran, the Red Sea—by supplying weapons and ordering drone strikes, cybercommands, and Special Forces without congressional approval? In short, is U.S. Foreign Relations law exempt from the Constitution's principle of checks and balances? As America waits to inaugurate its next President, how can we address this constitutional problem, which will require structural fixes, not just choosing particular personalities at the ballot box? In this panel, Harold Hongju Koh of Yale Law School discusses the new, extensively revised and updated version of his award-winning "The National Security Constitution" (Yale University Press, 2024). Dean Koh and his discussants will take a practical view of what constitutional challenges to expect from the Harris or Trump administration on the national security front.

“The World Together” or a World Apart? Pandemic Prevention, Preparedness and Response as Law of the Powerless

Room 2-02C

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on Global Health
Law

In 2021 and 2022, the World Health Assembly initiated negotiations on a Pandemic Agreement and amendments to the International Health Regulations (IHR), both expected to conclude by the 77th Health Assembly in May 2024. However, consensus among WHO Member States remains uncertain, leaving the outcome unclear. The Pandemic Agreement seeks to address gaps in health security and equity exposed by COVID-19, including zoonotic disease prevention, pathogen sharing, and equitable distribution of medical products. Over the past three years, negotiations have progressed rapidly for agreements of this scale. This panel will explore how these negotiations, regardless of their outcome, have illuminated key issues in global health law and governance, such as equitable technology transfer, intellectual property rights, human-animal-environment interactions, and access to pandemic pathogens.

Moderator:

International Investment and Human Rights: How Does International Law Control Environmental Impact on Local Communities?

Room 2-01B

Sponsored by
the ABILA
International
Investment
Law
Committee

Large-scale industrial projects are economically important but can have pernicious effects on surrounding communities. The Inter-American Court of Human Rights, in the recent landmark decision of La Oroya v. Peru, held Peru to be internationally responsible for its failure to protect the people of La Oroya from pollution generated by a century-old metal smelter complex. At the same time, the foreign owner of the complex continues to seek damages before an investor-State arbitral tribunal in Renco v. Peru for Peru’s failure to afford adequate flexibility in meeting pollution control regulations. Based on this fascinating case study, the panel will assess what contributions international human rights and investment law can and should make to controlling the impact of such projects.

South African Branch: Recent African Contributions to the Development of International Humanitarian Law

Room 2-02A

Sponsored by the ILA (South Africa) Branch

Africa has played an active role in the development of international humanitarian law (IHL), sometimes even initiating new paradigms. Members from the South African Branch of the International Law Association will discuss recent African contributions. Firstly, exploring the African Union's Common African Position on the Application of International Law to the Use of Information and Communication Technologies in Cyberspace (CAP), and its impact on IHL. Secondly, the panel will consider the crucial role African countries played in the negotiation and adoption of the UN Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons. Finally, the panel will comment on how the fluid nature and multiplicity of armed groups in the reason challenges those tasked with conflict classification. Offering a broad range of perspectives from practice, academia, civil society, and government, this session will highlight the significant and diverse ways in which African States and organizations are shaping the evolution of international humanitarian law.

Moderator:

- Clea Strydom, Secretary, International Law Association, South African Branch

Speakers:

- Martha Bradley, Professor of Public Law, University of Johannesburg
 - Sarah Mabeza, Regional Legal Advisor, ICRC; LLD candidate, University of Johannesburg

Room 2-02B

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on the International
Criminal Court

Join us for a screening of this recently released documentary short focused on the problem of the veto power of permanent members of the UN Security Council, particularly when the veto blocks efforts to stop or prevent genocide, war crimes, or crimes against humanity. The film, featuring renowned experts on the topic, explores a path to challenging this paralysis, including having the UN General Assembly request an Advisory Opinion from the International Court of Justice on whether there are legal limits to the veto in the face of atrocity crimes. Q&A to follow the film.

Moderator:

- Tim Slade, Writer, Director, and Producer of The Veto

Speakers:

- Justice Richard Goldstone, Former Chief Prosecutor, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda
- Jennifer Trahan, Professor, NYU Center for Global Affairs; Author, Existing Legal Limits to Security Council Veto Power in the Face of Atrocity Crimes (Cambridge University Press, 2020)

Protection of People at Sea: Human Rights on the Oceans

Every day around 30 million people – men, women, and children – are at sea. They are fishers, seafarers on merchant ships, offshore industry workers, cruise ship and ferry passengers, yacht crews, regular and irregular migrants, asylum seekers, and crews of public vessels, including warships. How does human rights law operate at sea? How does the allocation of power among states under the law of the sea affect the human rights obligations of these states? Where are the gaps in the system? And how can these areas of the law be combined to maximize protection for people at sea? This roundtable discussion among expert members of the ILA Committee on the Protection of People at Sea will explore these questions and offer some answers.

Co-Moderators:

- Coalter Lathrop, Principal, Sovereign Geographic; Chair, ABILA Committee on the Law of the Sea
- Carole Petersen, Cades Foundation Professor of Law, University of Hawai'i School of Law

Speakers:

- Steven Haines, Professor of Public International Law, School of Law and Criminology, University of Greenwich

Does International Law have the Power to Limit Cyberwar?

As modern conflicts take place in an increasingly digital world, cyber warfare has become an inevitable reality of contemporary armed conflict. But have our international laws and institutions kept up with this changing landscape? This panel will ask the following questions: Are international humanitarian law (IHL) and international criminal law (ICL) powerless in addressing cyber warfare? Or have they evolved in step with new means and methods of warfare? If so, how can these laws protect civilians who are often powerless in the face of increasingly sophisticated cyber attacks? The panel will explore how cyber warfare is harmful to civilians and whether IHL and ICL are appropriate legal frameworks to address these harms.

Moderator:

- Amanda Ghahremani, Research Fellow, Human Rights Centre, UC Berkeley

Speakers:

The Middle East in Crisis

Room 2-01B

This roundtable will explore the rapidly evolving and deeply rooted tensions in the Middle East, focusing on the growing conflict between Israel, Palestine, and the broader region. Bringing together experts with diverse viewpoints, this panel will offer a dynamic and timely discussion of one of the most pressing geopolitical crises today. It will assess the international legal implications of actions taken by all parties involved, particularly in light of relevant international legal frameworks such as the laws of armed conflict and state responsibility. The discussion will also address recent and ongoing International Court of Justice (ICJ) cases. This panel will provide critical insight into the role that international lawyers and legal institutions can play in shaping a path toward ceasefire and peace in the region.

Moderator:

- Warren Binford, Professor and W.H. Lea Endowed Chair, University of Colorado; Co-Chair, ILW 2024 Organizing Committee; Co-Chair, ABILA Committee on International Human Rights Law

The Pursuit of Gender Justice in Afghanistan and Beyond

Room 2-02B

The past year has witnessed a staggering global backlash against women's rights. In no place has the scale of deterioration been more extreme than Afghanistan. The Taliban has promulgated decrees curtailing Afghan women and girls' fundamental rights, enforcing an institutionalized regime of gender-based oppression through coerced confessions, arbitrary detention, torture, and sexual and gender-based violence. Afghan women have sought to hold the Taliban accountable before the UN Human Rights Treaties and Special Procedure Bodies, International Court of Justice, International Criminal Court, and in foreign jurisdictions, and fought to progress international law to better respond to their lived experiences through the codification of gender apartheid. This panel asks how advocates can leverage and improve these complementary justice initiatives.

Moderator:

- Sebastian Verelset, Transitional Justice Advisor, Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights

Speakers:

- Natasha Arnpriester, Senior Lawyer, Open Society Justice Initiative
- Metra Mehran, Afghanistan Program Director, Civic Engagement Project & Gender & Policy Advisor, Atlantic Council Strategic Litigation Project

Closing the Chemical Weapons Impunity Gap: An International Tribunal?

Experts in international humanitarian and criminal law will debate the establishment of the Exceptional Chemical Weapons Tribunal (ECWT), a civil society-driven international court, from the perspective of the principles of legality, legitimacy, jurisdiction, and victims' rights, while also discussing how such a tribunal would be situated in the current international landscape alongside the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and the International Criminal Court. This session will examine how the current international legal framework leaves gaps in international criminal justice, given political deadlock at the UN Security Council and the lack of jurisdiction of the ICC to try cases where chemical weapons have been used. The panel will debate whether the establishment of the ECWT to prosecute State and non-State actors for the use of chemical weapons would lead to the fragmentation of international criminal justice or the vindication of victims' rights.

Think Globally and Act Locally: Public and Private Sector Collaboration to Address Climate Change

Climate change mitigation and adaptation require coordination at the international, national, and sub-national levels. National laws and regulations incentivize private action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, yet progress remains uneven at best. Despite the limited success of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change under the Paris Agreement and decisions by international tribunals, global treaties remain largely aspirational and have failed to reduce GHGs sufficiently. To fill the gap, States, cities, businesses, and private investors are working collaboratively across borders on innovative initiatives, encouraging investment in clean energy, training for green jobs, smarter land use, more efficient transportation projects, and improved resilience. The panelists will discuss the ways in which cities, subnational regions, and private actors collaborate internationally in climate action and finance.

Empowering International Law to Address Rising Tensions in Outer Space: The Woomera Manual on the International Law of Military Space Activities and Operations

International law must be empowered to better promote space sustainability and provide a more reliable road map to avoid miscalculations and mistakes that may risk armed conflict in space. These aspirations first rely on a comprehensive exposition and examination of the existing legal framework for space, focusing on state practice and the full spectrum of international law applicable to military space activities in peace time, in times of stress and tension, and in an armed conflict. This panel addresses these issues amid growing threats to peace in space, drawing on an unprecedented international collaborative work, the Woomera Manual on the International Law of Military Space Activities and Operations (Oxford University Publishing, 2024).

Ocean (In)Justice in Planetary Futures

Amid the climate crisis, oceans have become central to policymakers, scientists, and commercial actors. Oceans supply food, medicines, and critical minerals and regulate weather and climate. However, human interventions, such as deep seabed mining, are increasing, with impacts still largely unknown due to the ocean's understudied nature. These interventions, including atmosphere-based climate actions like solar radiation management, may have secondary effects, potentially impacting different regions and interacting unpredictably. Climate change, ocean acidification, and pollution are already affecting humans and ecosystems, disproportionately harming coastal communities, especially Black, Indigenous, and people of color. In response, the concept of ocean justice is emerging, though its definition is still evolving. Some advocate granting rights to the ocean, while others emphasize increasing the participation of marginalized communities in decision-making and addressing historical injustices. This roundtable will explore how international law should adapt to govern the interconnected impacts of oceans and climate change with a focus on justice.

Approaches to Capacity and Consent, Their Evolution and Implementation

International law has experienced several paradigm shifts in relation to the right to legal capacity and its significance for both formal and informal decision-making. These shifts have taken place in international law's approaches to capacity and consent with regard to several groups, including children, persons with disabilities, women, older persons, and intersex persons. This roundtable brings together academics and practitioners to exchange insights across these identities, bringing together intersectional perspectives to map out a broader trend. Experts will also discuss the theoretical frameworks that have enabled shifts in approaches to capacity and consent, the extent to which these shifts have been reflected at the domestic level, and strategies for ensuring greater compliance with international law in this area moving forward.

Crimes against Humanity: From Draft Articles to New Treaty in a World on Fire?

Crimes against humanity remain a global scourge, with current justice mechanisms failing to curb violence or deliver justice to victims. In fall 2024, States will decide upon what action to take with respect to the negotiation of a new treaty based upon the 2019 ILC Draft Articles on Crimes Against Humanity, which have been under consideration by the UN Sixth Committee for five years. Aligned with the theme "powerless law or law for the powerless," this roundtable will examine the potential of a new treaty to serve victims, alongside obstacles to its adoption and implementation. Discussions will cover ongoing negotiations, international law challenges, and proposals to expand the treaty's scope, including forced marriage, gender apartheid, the slave trade, environmental crimes, the use of consensus in the Sixth Committee, and the need to address the north/south divide in international law-making.

Recognition and Enforcement of the Human Right to a Healthy Environment: Parallel Proceedings in International Courts – A Roundtable Discussion

On April 9, 2024, the European Court of Human Rights issued a landmark decision in which it found that Article 8 of the European Convention of Human Rights encompasses a right to protection from serious adverse effects of climate change. Meanwhile, the International Court of Justice, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights are each poised to issue advisory opinions on states' obligations to prevent and mitigate climate change. This roundtable discussion will address the outcome of the above-mentioned cases could lead to either the transformational development of international environmental law or to its fragmentation (or both).

Diplomatic and Consular Immunities: Time for Revisions?

The Vienna Conventions on Diplomatic and Consular Relations are over 60 years old. Much has changed since their adoption, suggesting the need for a reevaluation of their provisions in light of new realities. The International Law Association has established a Committee on Comparative Diplomatic and Consular Immunities, Privileges and Inviolabilities to review domestic decisions interpreting and applying Convention norms with an eye to identifying gaps, inconsistencies and possible solutions. This panel (which includes several ILA Committee members) will discuss some recent developments and actively solicit comments, insights and recommendations from the audience concerning the interpretation and application of these conventions (and related customary international law) in both bilateral and multilateral contexts.

The Evolving Geopolitical Landscape and Risks for Global Aviation

Room 2-02A

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on International
Arbitration

The evolving geopolitical landscape continues to put operational and commercial pressure on the global aviation ecosystem, jeopardizing the safety and security of air operations. International airlines and airport operators are routinely at the crossroads of (i) coercive diplomacy and act of war decisions made by governments, (ii) state responses to unforeseen events, and (iii) cyber threats from non-state actors. In recent years, the number of inter-state airspace disputes at the level of ICAO has grown significantly. However, the outcomes of these disputes did not necessarily alleviate the economic losses incurred by airlines and airports. In 2024, unforeseen state and non-state actions continue to challenge the ability of international law and international institutions to protect the economic rights of aviation actors, the safety and security of air operations, and, most importantly, the lives of passengers.

Centering Race and Empire in Human Rights Law and Scholarship

This panel brings together scholars at the forefront of Third World Approaches to International Law (TWAIL), Critical Race Theory (CRT), and human rights law to explore how race and empire operate within the international human rights framework, as well as the limits and emancipatory potential of law to dismantle trans-national structures of racial and colonial subordination. Racial justice and equality, despite being core human rights commitments, have been marginalized within the international human rights regime. The speakers will showcase scholarship that seeks to fundamentally rethink and expand the normative scope of human rights and engage critical topics in contemporary international human rights law, including migration, climate justice, socio-economic equality, and political equality.

The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child as “law for the powerless” Children in America

Human rights have tremendous potential to serve as “law for the powerless.” This roundtable will focus on American children, the only children in the world whose State has not ratified the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC). Human rights are not a panacea. Even if they were, we have no illusions about their short-term prospects for ratification. But children, and their lawyers, cannot demand human rights, or use them as models, unless they know what they are and how they can be used. This roundtable will consider the ways in which the CRC—or the rights framework of the CRC—could benefit American children. The speakers will consider contexts including child labor, reproductive health, foster care, and public education.

Hypocrisy and Double Standards in International Law

Room 1-01

In the international system, the charges of hypocrisy and double standards are ubiquitous, animating public discourse over wars, humanitarian catastrophes, international economic and environmental disputes, and human rights. But what, exactly, constitutes hypocrisy? What function does hypocrisy serve? Is the charge and practice of hypocrisy harmful to international law and institutions? When does the charge of hypocrisy promote state compliance with international commitments, and when does it dilute and harm compliance? When does the charge of hypocrisy devolve into “whataboutism,” an attempt to deflect and shift away from meaningful assessment of a state’s noncompliance with legal norms? Discussants will address these questions from a number of doctrinal and theoretical perspectives, drawing from international law, international relations, legal philosophy, and institutional theory and ethics.

Room 2-01B

Is international space law powerless to regulate new uses and plans for space? International space law is aging and minimalistic, but space activity is rapidly increasing, with many new entrants and risks. Should Indigenous viewpoints be reflected in future lawmaking? What about views of emerging space powers in Latin America and the Caribbean? And what can law do about the now-formidable power in the hands of private actors, like SpaceX? In this interactive roundtable, an interdisciplinary group of panelists will discuss these questions in a conversational format with opportunities for audience input. The conversation will focus on themes of governance, participation of different actors, and lawmaking, and it will address important areas where current law is or is not powerless.

The Role of International Law in Protecting Powerless Consumers in Global Trade

Room 2-02B

This panel intends to spark a discussion to understand better the crucial role of international law in safeguarding vulnerable consumers in global trade through three key points of discussion: the impact of international law on protecting vulnerable consumers in cross-border trades; remedies available to vulnerable consumers through international law; and the limitations of institutions in enforcing international private law. We will explore in detail how international trade laws and treaties, such as those governing the World Trade Organization and bilateral investment treaties, have enhanced consumer protection in global trade. This panel will also critically assess the limitations and failings of institutions in enforcing international private law for consumer protection, delve into the challenges posed by differing legal systems, regulations, and jurisdictional issues, as well as the inconsistencies and ineffectiveness in interpreting and applying international law.

The Rights of Children to Be Free of Labor and Exploitation: To What Extent Are They Now Protected by Customary International Law?

Room 1-01

*Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on the Formation of Rules of Customary International
Law*

A century after the adoption of the 1924 Geneva Declaration of the Rights of the Child, which was succeeded by numerous treaties, child labor and exploitation are increasing globally. The experts on this panel, representing diverse disciplines, will discuss such questions as: Why is child labor on the rise, and what role can international law play in reversing this trend? Which of the norms in relevant declarations and treaties bind all states as customary international law, and how can they be made a reality for exploited children? To what extent are relevant norms in the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights customary norms binding on businesses?

Incidental Proceedings Before the ICJ: Enforcing International Law or Exposing its Limits?

Room 2-02B

In response to ongoing conflicts involving potential violations of some of the most fundamental rules of international law, some States have turned to the International Court of Justice in an attempt to influence the behavior of the relevant parties. Several of these cases have involved incidental proceedings, including interventions and provisional measures. These incidental proceedings raise serious questions of fairness and effectiveness. Accordingly, panelists will address issues related to incidental proceedings before the ICJ, such as whether incidental proceedings are an effective tool for the powerless to enforce international law, including of erga omnes rights by third-States? Or are such proceedings – particularly when unsuccessful – a reflection of the powerlessness and limits of international law?

Moderator:

Speakers:

Powerless and Unlawful? Protecting the Rights of Climate Refugees

Room 2-01B

From extreme weather events to rising sea levels and desertification, climate change is forcing more and more people to move. Whether they move within their countries or worldwide, forcible displacement causes undue hardships to these communities. Moreover, international law does not protect this category of people, especially if they move across borders. Despite long-held recognition that mass movement of people will be one of the biggest impacts of climate change, the law has not stepped up to protect them. Thus, they remain powerless and defenseless. In one sense, this panel is about the "powerless law," but the panel will also discuss ways the law can help the powerless. We will look at the legal landscape (or the lack of it), rights violated, and the role of international law in protecting climate refugees. Speakers will map the existing legal landscape, detail novel proposals, and recommend how international law can become a "law for the powerless."

David v. Goliath: Harnessing the Power of Artificial Intelligence in International Arbitration

Room 2-02C

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on International
Arbitration

Technology has historically proven to be a formidable equalizer, reshaping the dynamics of power and access to justice. This panel will explore the transformative potential of generative artificial intelligence in leveling the playing field of international arbitration, where smaller parties often face significant challenges in navigating complex legal disputes against larger and more resourced adversaries. Against the backdrop of this metaphorical clash, our panel of experts will delve into the ways in which AI can empower smaller entities and individuals in international arbitration. By harnessing the capabilities of AI, these parties can leverage data-driven insights, sophisticated analytics, and innovative tools to assert their rights and advance their interests on the global stage.

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on International Intellectual Property Law

In May 2024, members of the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) adopted the WIPO Treaty on Intellectual Property, Genetic Resources and Associated Traditional Knowledge. This new instrument built upon two decades of explorations and deliberations at the WIPO Intergovernmental Committee on Intellectual Property and Genetic Resources, Traditional Knowledge and Folklore. Conducted in a roundtable format, this panel brings together leading experts to explore the following questions: What are the key takeaways from this new treaty? How will it affect the future protection of traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions? What are the next steps at both the domestic and international levels?

Room 2-01A

On September 16, 2022, Mahsa Jina Amini died in police custody after being detained by the Islamic Republic of Iran's so-called Morality Police for "improper" hijab. Her death sparked the "Woman, Life, Freedom" Movement, where tens of thousands of people took to streets across Iran to protest the Islamic Republic's strict laws. Beginning in summer 2023, a coalition of civil society organizations came together to forensically preserve digital artifacts documenting human rights violations and atrocity crimes committed by the State against civilians during the protests. This panel will discuss the process of creating the coalition and Iranian Archive, and will spotlight some of the important investigations currently underway and prospects for universal jurisdiction cases or structural investigations.

Claiming Power: Centering Justice for Victims in International Law

Room 2-02A

This panel, composed of leading academic and practitioner experts in international human rights law, reparations, and social justice, will consider the conference theme of ‘powerless law or law for the powerless’ through the lens of victims’ challenges to securing reparation. Although the right to reparations is well-established, victims of serious human rights abuses often struggle to turn that right into reality. Through short presentations and moderated Q&A, the discussion will shed light on the ways in which violence and trauma can function as a creative source for the development of international law; how victims have claimed or attempted to claim control of their own case, giving meaning to modern concepts of victim-centered justice; and whether access to (international) law itself is a form of reparative social justice.

Beyond Compliance: Reflections on a Protective Environment for Children in War

Room 2-01B

Co-sponsored by the ABILA
Committee on International
Human Rights and the ABILA
Committee on International Humanitarian
Law

One in six children today lives in an area affected by armed conflict. Children often suffer the gravest consequences of war. They are killed, maimed, orphaned, and subjected to forced migration, food insecurity, and loss of educational opportunities. In addition, youth are often forced to fight and girl children are forced into sex slavery to armed groups. This Roundtable Discussion will explore what a protective environment for children in armed conflict might look like. The contributions are informed by conceptual and empirical findings of the Beyond Compliance Consortium’s Research Program on Building Evidence for Promoting Restraint by Armed Actors. Drawing on quantitative and qualitative research, the roundtable discussants will highlight initiatives to improve the situation of children in armed conflict.

The Legitimacy of Power and the Power of Legitimacy

Room 1-01

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on Legitimacy and Fundamental Principles of International
Law

Many international relations students view the actions of states and other international actors as a simple matter of power and interest. Others value international law as a constraint on power and arbiter of legitimacy in international affairs. Or perhaps international law itself is illegitimate and, therefore, not worthy of power, obedience, or respect. This panel will examine the nature and power of legitimacy, what makes international law legitimate (or not), why legitimacy matters, whether power confers legitimacy (or vice versa) - and whether legitimacy should ever be a factor in the understanding or application of international law.

Arbitrating with International Organizations

Room 2-02C

Sponsored by
the ABILA
Committee on
United Nations
Law

As the UN International Law Commission (ILC) embarks upon its study on the “Settlement of disputes to which international organizations are parties,” States and international organizations are sharing novel information on the nature of their dispute resolution practices with international organizations. Such practices range from negotiations to conciliation and judicial proceedings, with varying degrees of success. To contribute to the ongoing debate on an asserted accountability gap, this panel will shed light on a mode of dispute settlement that often takes place behind closed doors: arbitration. Composed of speakers from the ILC, international institutions, States, and law firms involved, the panel will discuss the conditions under which arbitrating with international organizations can result in effective dispute settlement.

Moderator:

Hot Topics

Room 1-01

Every year, ABILA reserves one slot for a late breaking panel. This year's panel will analyze two of the most pressing background questions for any rapid assessment of global crises: what is the responsibility of states in the face of fast-developing crises, and what remedies are available to the international community (or any of its members) to address them under international law. The session will address the relevance of this lens in light of our shared current experience. It will provide expert insights into how state responsibility and the remedies it offers can help to make sense of the pressing recent crises and will further address how the framework might anticipate emerging and potential situations. Coming from diverse perspectives, the panelists will engage evolving perspectives on state responsibility, as well as the role of states in unilaterally responding to instances of internationally wrongful acts (e.g., through sanctions) or by invoking international pacific dispute resolution mechanisms.
